SUBSCRIPTIONS SMALL

The subscriptions in Alma for the Roosevelt Memorial fund have so far proven small, although there seems to be a great interest in the matter, and it has been decided to continue the work in Alma until Saturday afternoon. Until that time subscriptions can still be made at the banks or at the drug stores. It is very probable that there will be considerable solicitation Friday and Saturday also in order that the quota of the city may be met.

WHEN A CHILD HAS CROUP

Thousands of mothers say Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is the best remedy they know for croup, coughs and colds. It cuts the thick, choking mucus, clears away the phlegm, opens air passages and eases hoarseness. The gasping, strangling fight for breath gives way to quiet breathing and peaceful sleep.

WHY SADNESS IN OLD AGE?

Too True That the Two Things Are Frequently Associated, But Should Not Be.

It is a common belief that as a person advances in years he becomes not only a wiser but a sadder man. That one should gain knowledge as he grows older is thoroughly in order, but that he should become increasingly burdened with the cares of life and saddened because of hopes that have not been fulfilled is not a necessary condition.

It is true that the clouds that gather about the setting sun do take a sober coloring from an eye that has kept watch in man's mortality, to paraphrase Wordsworth a bit, and that the thought of constantly lessening activity and prospects which age entails is enough to make one pause and consider. But consideration that goes far enough to reveal that all time, whether of this world or another, is an unending opportunity for progression.

After all, the whole matter of age is something that has to do with the mind rather than the body. And when the body begins to fail, when gray hairs appear, the step becomes less springy, sleep more difficult and joy in things that used to please an impossibility, sadness should not be the result.

The mind is a great crucible which receives and transfigures in some fashion impressions from all the objects and facts of life. The will is the master which determines what the transfiguration shall be. A man can let his will relax or he can keep it active, regardless of age. He can make of his existence a heaven or a hell, whether he be old or young, rich or poor, in a favored spot of the earth, on desert soil or fallen on evil days.

Exercise of the will cannot at last stave off death, and it may not induce prolonged health or material welfare. But it can aid in all these things, and entirely regardless of its material accomplishments, the will that is kept properly on the alert can lead him in hope.

"Oh, well for him whose will is strong."

For him whose will is weak, or rather allowed to become weak, there is joy neither in a sunset nor a sunrise. And even the bright light of noonday will only dazzle and bewilder, rather than encourage and inspire.

The strong will sees endlessly, "beyond the sunset and the paths of all the western stars." It strengthens a man in hope and leads him to see unlimited possibilities as the years pass. Sadness is the last thing that ought to characterize age.—Kansas City Star.

Elephants' Picnic.

An act not down on the program was given without charge the other day in the old seaport town of Marblehead, Mass., when four elephants of a small circus, named with fine alliteration General Foch, General Pershing, General Haig, and Princess Pat, jumped a stone wall, escaped the circus, and took to the woods. The personnel of the circus, acrobats, riders, clowns and conjurers, followed, and so did many of the townspeople and half a dozen policemen, but the elephants made for the woods first and there they spent the day with a large and appreciative audience watching on the outskirts. Peanuts and bananas, usually a temptation to elephants, failed to entice them from their New England jungle; but as twilight fell, and habit suggested feeding time, the big beasts came peacefully out of the woods and allowed the trainer and his assistants to lead them back to the circus grounds. And all Marblehead went home to belated suppers.

How Laundering Affects Clothes.

After thirty washings with hard soap, soda, sodium silicate and perborate, respectively, linen and cotton textiles showed higher strength values with hard water than with soft water. With soft water sodium silicate showed a distinct injurious action on cotton and perborate was still more harmful. Goods washed with soap improve in luster and show a brilliant white color by reflected light; goods washed in soda show a strong yellow in transmitted light with a slight shade of pink; by reflected light they appear slightly gray. After washing with silicate the goods are white but quite without luster, being dull and chalky.

The House of Kuppenheimer Clothes

A Frank Statement About Clothing Prices

There's no denying the fact that clothing prices are high. We regret it as much as you do and we would indeed, welcome a return to pre-war conditions and prices. But, unfortunately, such cannot be the case.

Some say that present clothing prices are unjustly high. We don't think so. A little investigation into the facts will readily show to the thinking man why they are high now and will continue so for some time to come.

At every stage in the clothing industry, from the raw material to the consumer, expenses are being added. Starting right at the beginning, the land upon which the sheep graze is more valuable than formerly. The feed for the sheep costs the grower more. The herdsman gets more money. It costs more to ship the wool to market. Trimmings and linings, and everything which goes to make up the finished garment, are higher. A comparison of the wages now paid to garment workers reveals an increase of 150% to 200% over the pre-war scale.

The increased cost of labor in all branches of the clothing industry now represents about 80% to 90% of the cost of a finished garment.

It may therefore be readily understood why clothing prices have so greatly advanced.

We fully realize our responsibility in pricing the clothes we sell fairly and honestly. The House of Kuppenheimer, with whom we are associated, are also doing everything in their power to keep prices within sane limits.

The thing to be careful about in buying your fall and winter clothes is to BE SURE OF VALUE FOR THE PRICE YOU PAY.

Kuppenheimer Clothes

can be depended upon for the best—best in fabrics, best in style, best in tailoring. For many years, they have held a national reputation for their quality and all-around goodness. They never depart one iota from their high standards—never.

We guarantee your utmost satisfaction in a Kuppenheimer garment. The House of Kuppenheimer guarantees it, too. Buy a Kuppenheimer suit or over
